About Kinetic

Praised by Houston Public Media as “Houston’s Indie, Conductorless Orchestra” that has “found its niche in Houston’s music scene,” Kinetic is a conductorless ensemble of 16 young professional musicians committed to amplifying diverse, under-represented, and newly composed classical music to communities in and beyond Houston, through flexible chamber and orchestral ensemble performances.

With collaboration at its core, the ensemble has partnered with numerous artistic organizations to create innovative performance experiences, including Moody Center for the Arts, Musiqa, Windsync, NobleMotion Dance, Musiqa, Houston Contemporary Dance Company, Archway Gallery, Hoppa Project, Houston Center for Contemporary Craft — and more. A champion of new music, Kinetic has premiered over a dozen new works by emerging and established composers of our time, including Karim Al-Zand, Paul Novak, Daniel Temkin, Alexandra T. Bryant, and Peter Klatzow.

Kinetic is deeply committed to its educational and outreach initiatives, which equip young and emerging musicians in the greater Houston area with chamber music and musical leadership skills, and introduce classical music to audiences both young and old through informal and conversational settings. Recent educational residencies include at Sam Houston State University, HSPVA, Memorial High School, and Stratford High School.

Support Kinetic

Kinetic is a 501(c)3 non profit organization with a mission to amplify diverse, under-represented, and newly composed classical music to communities in and beyond Houston.

Because we're a small organization, every contribution makes a big difference, and 100% of it goes toward our musicians and programs.

To make a contribution, stop by our info table after the concert, or visit: www.kineticensemble.org/donate.

Thanks for your support!

See you on Sunday, February 20
for Kinetic's next concert:
